Alliance for Workers Liberty: apologists for imperialism [6]

Thu, 15/05/2008 - 22:00

The leaders of the Alliance for Workers Liberty (AWL) argue that socialists should not fight for the withdrawal of US and British troops from Iraq and Afghanistan. They claim that, were the occupation to end immediately, reactionary Islamic forces would annihilate the Iraqi labour movement. Some comrades in the organisation are challenging this shameful position. To assuage their fears, Martin Thomas published a "questions and answer" in the run up to their conference. Simon Hardy and Luke Cooper unpick his arguments and find - unsurprisingly - that Thomas is an apologist for imperialism Read more... [6]

Respect's crisis is opportunity for new workers party [8]

Mon, 01/10/2007 - 17:00

In early September Respect MP George Galloway circulated a letter to the Respect National Council entitled "It was the best of times, it was the worst of times?". The letter appears to point to a possible early disintegration of the "Unity Coalition." Galloway makes a series of bitter complaints about how Respect is run, ranging from complaints over office procedures to accusations of ineptitude in election work and a general lack of accountability and democracy. He ends by warning that Respect may be facing oblivion. Although he does not mention by name the organisation he holds responsible for all this, it is quite obviously the Socialist Workers Party. International Workers League "Morenoites"

Nahuel Moreno [10] started his political life in Argentina in the late 1930s and came to prominence in the struggles against Peronism in the workers movement. In the 1953 split in the Fourth International, Moreno sided with the Socialist Workers Party (US) and the International Committee, but 10 years later when the fourth International was reunified he became its leader in Latin America. Later he built the Socialist Workers Party [11] in Argentina and his international organisation [12] which came to dominate the continent Read more...[9]

Tue, 13/03/2007 - 23:00

The campaign for the French presidential elections, due on 22 April and 6 May, is now in full swing. The two front-runners: Nicolas Sarkozy for the right wing UMP party and Ségolène Royal for the Socialist Party (PS) have already launched their campaigns. Sarkozy is in the lead. These elections come on the heels of intense class struggles over the last two years - the successful campaign against European Constitution, the uprising by youth in the banlieues (the neglected outer suburbs of French cities) and the mass youth struggle against the CPE in 2006.
